“ Underneath the bridge, they sleep

Morning dawns, they silently weep

People pass by, not a second glance.

Sheets of cardboard become their dance.

Hidden in plain sight, their suffering grows

Outsiders unaware of their woes.

Many battle demons within their mind

Every day is a struggle to find.

Sanctuary is a distant dream

Tears fall silently, caught in the stream.

Indifference surrounds them, an endless fight

Crooked smiles hide their plight.

“ Prison bars confine my soul indefinitely, refraining freedom for hopeful grins. Inmates locked away to serve time, shadows cast on our green-mile oftentimes forgotten as silence cried.

Cut off from God's country. Everyday was my struggle to survive, navigating our green-mile so deprived. Surrounded by walls of steel, imprisoned hearts begin to feel. Encased in societies without grace, turning slowly into hardened faces.

Years pass by as my days dragged on, struggling to find where they belong. Endless cycle of regret and pain, trapped in your beloved prison society chain.

*God help us.
This world needs Jesus.*

Innocents slaughtered by demons breaking our hearts.

*♥ Beautiful boy Antwon, God's own reflection of pure love...
You are free now, our handsome little man, from confusion and fear.*

Deep down inside where God speaks to us...you sensed, you knew.

*No more tears little lamb.
Released from fear... No confusion - Only Love and Peace beyond all understanding.*

Your life cut so short by hate's ignorant hand devastated not only your loving mom and dad sister niece family friends but all good people that hear.

*Heaven just got more beautiful when you arrived,
if that's possible.*

Heard your mom say, in deepest pain and endless tears that she missed you so much.

Hardest part is feeling the longing for you, during the wait.

Jesus warned if you Love Him, the world will hate you, as they hated Him.

You were just too beautiful for this world.

Pray for us, Antwon...ask God to give His strengthening Grace to mom and dad, all who love you... so to carry on.

*You are home now, bright star. Your work here is finished.
A Job very well done!*

You touched and are still touching hearts all over the world.

“ I didn't know Antwon, but I did see the video of what happened and I've been reading what others who knew him have been saying and it breaks my heart. I also read the poem that he wrote 2 years ago and it brought me to tears.

To his parents, you raised a very bright and beautiful young man and I know that you were proud of him. Please don't allow how he was taken from this world define his life. How he left was so tragic and so wrong but, from what I have seen, how he lived was full of life and light. Please allow his light to shine brightly. As a mother, I cannot even begin to tell you how so very sorry I am. No parent should lose a child and no parent, most certainly, should lose a child in this way. I know, in my heart, that Antwon is with Jesus and he is resting in His arms. I am keeping you and your whole family in my prayers. God will see you through, although I'm sure you do not see how right now. I cry for you and I cry for what should have been. Keep the faith, stay strong and God be with you always! :(<3
